as they had to procure coolies, and work their plantations on the Indian model—in my opinion a most probable contingency; but he that how it may, trouble will have to be taken and expense spent. But the first thing to be done is to get the Government are in a position to point unequivocally to that, the rest is vain. With that, from one or other of these colonies, or from England, may come the capital and enterprise. The Government are in a position to point unequivocally to that, the rest is vain. With that, from one or other of these colonies, or from England, may come the capital and enterprise.

It was matter of regret to me that in making her return voyage there was no opportunity for the South Australian steamer to put into Camden Harbour—the site of another new settlement, with which the Government are in a position to point unequivocally to that, the rest is vain. With that, from one or other of these colonies, or from England, may come the capital and enterprise. The Government are in a position to point unequivocally to that, the rest is vain. With that, from one or other of these colonies, or from England, may come the capital and enterprise.

A rapid run, albeit steaming half-speed, of eight days from Swan River to Adelaide, including eight days' detention in King George's Sound, completed the South Australian voyage, and this magnificent island. As the only trip of the kind ever made by a steamer, it is entitled to exceptional notice. It is no slight thing for a steamer to attempt to cross the straits, to make the shortest voyage from Sydney to King George's Sound—a distance of nearly 5000 miles—to pass through the intricate Barrier Reef, navigate strange seas, and enter unknown ports; and great credit, it will generally be admitted, is due to the captain of the ship, who has accomplished his arduous task. Both of Captain Pain and the boat he commands, I can hardly speak in sufficiently high terms. The only trifling accident occurred throughout the voyage, and that was the loss of a boat passing between the Vernon Islands, which lie to the west of its entrance, when, in consequence of paying too great a degree of attention to the marine authority to the settlement, and keeping close to the northern island, we ran aground on a sandbank, where we were detained until the following morning's tide bore us off. Thus the Henry Ellis, the Yatala, and the steamer all ran aground in entering or leaving Adam Bay—a trifling accident, but one which might have proved the navigation of the port, but of the want of a complete and effective survey. The channel between the islands, when found by sounding—and it is needless to say, an equal distance from each, proved to have about six fathoms—was not deep enough. The rest of the voyage—difficult enough at times—was effected with the utmost success; and the circumnavigation of Australia, inclusive of twenty-eight days' detention in King George's Sound, was completed in less than two months. Perhaps I may be permitted, in conclusion, to refer to my own part in the transaction as not altogether unworthy of a notice—a newspaper correspondent, despatched in an unpretending business-like way, to report the progress of the expedition, and to write a few lines for the press. The scenes which a few years back were regarded as among the wildest and most formidable of any on the face of the globe.

MEMOIR OF THE LATE JOHN LEECH.

By SHIRLEY BROOKS, in the Illustrated London News, November 19.

WHILE preparing for the readers of the Illustrated London News a portrait of one of our great artists whose early death has been a great loss to the country, the directors of the journal have desired that the engraving should be accompanied by a memoir of its subject, and they do me the honour of believing that the sketch of the life of John Leech, which I am now writing, will be found to be a worthy addition to the graceful and generous tributes which have been universally offered by the British press to the memory of him whom we have lost. The artist, I trust, some such memorial may be written, and the last service, which friends could do, is paid to the dead.

"The gladdenest of a thousand breaths,"

Of the earlier portion of the life of John Leech, I have little to say which is not to be found in the more carefully compiled books of reference in every library. Leech claimed him rightfully; but he was born in the year 1817, and his father, who was a schoolmaster, was educated at the Charterhouse, where his friend William Makepeace Thackeray, near whose remains his own are laid, was his old schoolfellow. He always retained a strong interest in his school, and his father, who was a schoolmaster, was educated at the Charterhouse, where his friend William Makepeace Thackeray, near whose remains his own are laid, was his old schoolfellow. He always retained a strong interest in his school, and his father, who was a schoolmaster, was educated at the Charterhouse, where his friend William Makepeace Thackeray, near whose remains his own are laid, was his old schoolfellow.

There is no doubt that school-life thirty-five years ago was rougher than now, especially for the younger boys. I have no recollection of hearing John Leech speak of his part of his life, and I am sure that the advantages which he gained at the noble old school was a faculty which very well-informed persons are in the habit of stating not to be invariably lost, and which, under proper education—the power of writing, excellent English—the power of writing, excellent English—the power of writing, excellent English.

The artist, I trust, some such memorial may be written, and the last service, which friends could do, is paid to the dead.

There is no doubt that school-life thirty-five years ago was rougher than now, especially for the younger boys. I have no recollection of hearing John Leech speak of his part of his life, and I am sure that the advantages which he gained at the noble old school was a faculty which very well-informed persons are in the habit of stating not to be invariably lost, and which, under proper education—the power of writing, excellent English—the power of writing, excellent English—the power of writing, excellent English.

ere-looking persons are sometimes impatient of and deliberation—they are impatient, not of anything, but of the quiet nature of the things who live by habit and rule are impeople are nervously impatient of being re-to keep pace with other eyes and tongue to a peculiar creepsiness of irritation. We do not we are mistaken in saying that all great talkers attention as a grievance. Quiet natured people of every other form of relaxation, and are im-so all their lives. Thus Sydney Smith was ngly impatient of music. "Nothing," he he said, "disturbs the quiet nature of a man le for such a length of time, unless under of a jury, he would not submit and to offer him the whole range of ed amusements was like tempting a tiger to attack him." I have known a man of e other hand, who can tell the frenzy of im-ance that even good talk, if at all continuous, stirs persons whose notions of amusement take a active turn—in a party of young people, for ple, conversation is the only natural and agree-city is the one great check and physician for of impatience—that power before which all out-of the world is dumb, and which, if it is not ore-bore, "though the hearer would prefer tooth-or ear-ache to his conversation." It is only in ne cases that men give full and free vent to im-ance, when they know their time is marked out them, and when they are not under the necessity people are educational lessons in patience which ed if not carried beyond endurance, or tried the imperturbable. A great example of the

However, as a rule, nothing more effective in

...THE DEGENERACY OF THE GREEKS.—One of the of spectacles which the earth affords of the degenerating and degenerating nations, the power of man is presented by the modern Greeks.

whole, pure and more directly descended from ancient Greeks than was the case of the poputhe blood in their veins as those who fell at Thermopylae, and who probably the more were politicians or traders now in Athens, the our ancestors were among the very men who, or imagination, or pure intellect, have been the s and instructors of mankind. What singular thinkers, and statesmen—who can say? And still more, can explain the mysterious of which genius broke the power, and elled the genius, and changed the power, political dissensions weakened the Grecian unities within, and that successive hordes of Greeks, Persians, and Macedonians, the country and extended the empire. We know that the cessions, and the Greece of modern times, the reductions, and the Greece of modern times, the ple, pictured as the Greece of old. The forests back burned, or turned into sheep pastures, and the encroaching arid climate ually drives the people to the higher mountains. On Parnassus the forest begins only to meet with the silver fir. "These conditions," says

...ON BEAUMANOIR PARK'S BEDSTEAD.—The following has been the substance of a letter of a letter from one of your correspondents, speaks of the bed of King Richard (slain in an night before the battle of Bosworth) being in the of the great bedstead of Beaumanoir Park, and at the great bed of Ware. This is certainly the case, as the bedstead of that tyrant is in the possession of the owner of Beaumanoir Park, in Leicestershire, and stands in a room of that fine mansion, and yet the bedstead of King Richard in accordance with the style of the period in that monarch lived. The bedstead belonged to family of the Drakes, who kept the Blue Boar (the Arms), in Leicester, at the time of Richard's death, and the year after the battle of Bosworth where a large quantity of gold, which the had secreted in hidden drawers of the bedstead, stolen from it. The robbers were discovered a few afterwards and executed at Leicester. From the time of Richard's death, the bedstead of that people, in that county, and remains to this than two hundred years, from whence it was brought to Beaumanoir Park. The bedstead is a very good specimen of oak carving of that day, and is a fine example of the numerous visitors of the mansion of Beaumanoir.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 7,

to explain that we have lost the revenue. It was declared to be necessary to break up the hold of the squatters over certain lands, and to introduce a number of small settlers. It is said that this purpose has been accomplished, yet those who rejoice over it call out because the routed and discomfited squatters do not pay so much as they did when in the enjoyment of their comfortable monopoly.

With regard to the rent payable for the unappropriated remainder still left in pastoral occupation the Act furnishes a standard of value which it is fair to apply. Unused lands, it is provided, may be put up to auction at an upset rental of one pound per square mile. The reduced area of the assessed rent is estimated by the Commissioner at about six millions of acres. Supposing, for the sake of round numbers, we increase it to 6,400,000 acres, the leased land will include 10,000 square miles, which at the upset rental will be worth £10,000 a year. As a matter of fact it fetches over £26,000, or more than two and a half times the upset price. This is a considerable advance when it is remembered that a large amount of inferior land is included, and that the choice spots have been picked out for purchase.

A diminished rental from that part of the colony which is most exposed to purchase, what is to be expected. In selling our land we are using up our capital, and the interest must of necessity fall off. The only counterbalancing consideration is this, that the value of the unsold portion is continually increasing in consequence of the increase of population, and that areas previously neglected and unoccupied are taken up. The sale of land, however, is or at least ought to be a great financial gain. The interest obtainable on the purchase price of land is a far higher sum than is obtainable as a rental. The one pound, or two pounds a square mile, which is the minimum official rental, or the higher sum which may be obtained from lessees, represents a much smaller annual sum than the interest on the price of the same quantity of land. For £640, at five per cent. interest, represents an annual sum of £32. If the money received for the land were thus put out to interest, the gain on a sale as compared to a lease would be very perceptible. But we do not know what the money put to interest spend it, and the capital disappears. Still, if the money were spent wisely in opening up new communications and in importing population, it would be invested in a way that would increase the value of what remained unsold. That value, however, would not be recovered by the State if the land is sold at a fixed price, regardless of the wrong imparted to it by the expenditure of the public funds.

It seems admitted on all hands that a larger rental might be obtained for the Crown lands, if longer and more exclusive leases were given. The disputable point is whether it is worth while to get the larger revenue on those terms. It is asserted that to give the sort of tenure asked for, would be to create a fresh monopoly, and to check the progress of settlement. If the assumption were true that it would be a good argument against long and close leases. But it is open to disproof by an appeal to the nature of the case as well as to experience.

A correspondent has suggested that the real worth of the squatters' complaints about the shortness of the lease and the intrusion of free selectors, should be put to the test by establishing two rates of rental for the two sorts of tenure and giving the lessee his option of either. Thus, for instance, let us suppose that a lease for ten years closed against free selection, and on a lease of only five years, then the rental having been determined according to the present law, either by assessment or auction, the lessee should be offered the liberty of taking it on the improved tenure at double the rental. If the offer were accepted, the revenue would gain; if it were rejected, the lessee would have no valid ground of complaint at the character of his tenure. The idea is certainly ingenious, and does not seem incapable of practical application. It would put some current assertions to the touchstone of experiment.

If the requisite quantity of land suitable for agricultural settlement were reserved, there would be no good reason for apprehending any obstruction to the progress of the bona fide farmer. We have had now three years experience of the maximum demand for land. Since the Land Act was passed we have not only had the natural current demand for land satisfied, but the repressed demand of previous years. An extra stimulus has been given too by the bounty of a reduced price, and by the eagerness of capitalists to secure themselves by taking up the eyes of the country wherever they could. We can fix the limit, therefore, beyond which the real demand cannot pass, and if an ample allowance were reserved in suitable situations, the remainder might be leased without any apprehension of unfavorable results, a power of resumption being reserved to meet unforeseen and exceptional circumstances.

RE-ELECTION OF THE NEW MINISTERS.—The Legislative Assembly will meet this afternoon at the usual hour, leaving home on Tuesday last postponed for a week. A New Government having been formed, the Ministers will have to go back to their constituencies for re-election. Resolutions have been introduced for the purpose of sending the members to respective offices the seats of the new Ministers have become vacant, will be proposed by some member of the Assembly; and it is probable that the bill will be again adjourned probably for a month or five weeks, in order to allow time for the elections.

CO-OPERATION.—We have received a copy of the rules of the General Co-operative Society which has been formed in London and Sydney. As we are interested in the history of many similar societies in England we have none means of judging, but they have been certified to by Mr. Martin as in conformity to him, and he is a supporter, against hasty conclusions, and registered friendly society. So far as we are able to judge, the rules seem well adapted for practical working, but provision is made for altering the rules if a majority of two-thirds agree. If applied to the constitution of their own country. Mr. Wentworth's Act, it will be remembered, contained a clause to this effect, but it had to be altered, since men should feel more anxious about the ownership of a grocery store than about the constitution of their own and their children's country, unless they were to be led to consider that such a duty is personal and pecuniary interest in the former is more dissimile than in the latter. The Co-operative Store has already been established, and it is scarcely necessary to say that the success of the venture depends upon the honesty of its members, will not depend upon the excellence of the rules, but upon the extent of support it receives from the working classes, and upon the soundness and honesty of the management.

BENEFIT OF MR. BYRNE AND MISS HUDSON.—The Lyceum Theatre takes a benefit at the Lyceum Theatre this evening, for which occasion the drama of "Levanti," the play of "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," and the comedy of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," have been selected, and in the latter piece the members of the Matinee Club will appear.

LADY DON PERFORMANCES.—Yesterday evening the Lyceum Theatre took a benefit for the Lyceum Theatre, with a very excellent cast, including Miss Annie Lockhart, and all the leading members of the company, with Lady Don and Miss Hudson. The comedy was admirably acted, and the audience was very large. The proceeds of the evening were given by these ladies in such a manner as to win very enthusiastic approval. The musical performance of "Emilia's" soloist, in which Lady Don and Miss Hudson participated, was very successful. The singing of Mr. Jackson, as "Good Queen Bess," was extremely amusing. There was a large and very fashionable audience.

THURSDAY, 9th February, at 11 o'clock.

T. W. BOWDEN has received instructions from the proprietors to sell by auction, the very valuable property above alluded to, being, without exception, the most desirable water-side premises in Darling Harbour likely to be offered for sale in any year to come, and now one of the busiest spots in the city by day and night.

THE PHOENIX WHARF has been long occupied by Messrs. Manning, Esq., and is very generally called his wharf, sometimes the Parramatta Steamers' Wharf, from the frequent arrival and departure of the steamers from and to that place.

The steamers of the Illawarra Company also trade to this wharf from the Manning River, Brisbane Water, Wollongong, Kiama, Shoalhaven, Merimbula, Clyde River, Moruya, &c.

With the Wharf will be sold all the Stores, Offices, sheds, cottages, carpenters, blacksmiths, and engineers shops, north of the two gateways, and defined on the plan as lot 12. The southern boundary being two hundred feet long from east to west, the frontage to the water about 47 feet, and the eastern boundary 96 feet.

The purchase of this lot will be allowed by the Government to extend the existing wharves much further into the harbour by driving piles and plankings upon them, so that a very large additional surface can be added to the present extensive area.

The line and boundary alluded to, is marked on the plan. Lot 2—THE VICTORIA WHARF OR WHARVES, having a frontage to Darling Harbour of about 172 feet, exclusive of the side accommodation allowed by the Government.

It is further bounded on the east by 54 feet of the western boundary of the hotel premises.

This property is also known as North-west Wharf, which runs out into the harbour. It adjoins the Phoenix Wharf, separated only by a boundary line of 105 feet long. The frontage to Shelley-street on the east is 121 feet, and the southern boundary is 121 feet, and is bounded by the Clarence Hotel allotment 59 feet, and again on the south by 47 feet 10 inches to Erskine-street; at its western termination, close to the Corporation Wharf. It is further bounded on the east by 54 feet of the western boundary of the hotel premises.

For more to Shelley-street, to enable the purchaser to add to the present building, and at some future date to erect on the site one more suitable to the requirements of that period. A most desirable spot for a family hotel, or for the accommodation of passengers per steamers, arriving at all hours of the night, cannot be found in the city; and, if erected at once, would supply the existing demand, ensure a fortune to the proprietor, and greatly contribute to the comfort of hundreds of visitors to the city from the numerous ports along the coast.

The frontage to Erskine-street, on the south, is 60 feet 2 inches; to Shelley-street, on the east, 51 feet 5 inches. The northern boundary is 96 feet by lot 2; and on the west by 54 feet of the same lot.

LOT 4 is a corner lot, opposite the Clarence Hotel, having 22 feet 6 inches to Erskine-street, 83 feet to Shelley-street—the main approach to the wharves; bounded on the north by a line to allow of a side-entrance; and on the east by 81 feet.

LOT 5 adjoins the last-mentioned lot, having the same dimensions, with the back entrance from the lane at the north end.

The purchaser of Lot 4 may find it to his interest to secure this lot, should he contemplate the erection of a building worthy the situation.

LOT 6, a very important lot, left large to ensure (if possible) a spacious store or warehouse for the temporary reception of a portion of the goods between the wharf and other part of the wharf, and is now frequently exposed to all weathers, or is sold off cheap to make room for further arrivals. The frontage to Erskine-street is 81 feet 6 inches, the northern boundary 50 feet, the southern 47 feet 6 inches, with right of entrance from the lane.

This lot would cut up to advantage for four stores, of 20 feet frontage to each.

The buildings on Lots 4, 5, and 6, will of course become the property of the purchasers of each lot.

The attention of the directors of the various steam companies, the owners of coasting and foreign-going ships, and the merchants in general, is invited to the FREEHOLD PROPERTY, not to be surprised at the situation and trade by anything in the harbour.

The lots are marked out and numbered on the plan. The large plan, now on view at the Mart, gives further particulars, and lithographs are prepared for intending purchasers.

BY ORDER OF THE MORTGAGEE.
COOPER-STREET, SURRY HILLS.
LACEY'S FAMILY HOTEL AND THREE DWELLING-HOUSES, situated at the junction of Cooper and Little Elizabeth streets.

MORT AND CO. have received instructions from the MORTGAGEE to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on WEDNESDAY, 8th February.

This really valuable property, situated at the junction of Cooper and Little Elizabeth streets, comprises an allotment of land, having a frontage of 60 feet more or less to Cooper-street, and 120 feet, more or less, to Little Elizabeth-street, on which are erected three valuable built premises, LACEY'S HOTEL, containing extensive cellars, bar, parlour, two sitting-rooms, four large up-stairs rooms, and a balcony. The rooms are throughout unusually well finished, the out-offices comprise large kitchen and servants' room, coach-house, and stable, large yard, six-stall brick-built stable, and left over.

Adjoining the hotel in Cooper-street are TWO DWELLING-HOUSES, built of brick with slated roofs, each containing a parlour, two bedrooms, and passage, and two bedrooms above, with detached brick-built kitchen and servants' room over. At the rear of the hotel, and facing LITTLE ELIZABETH STREET, is a SUBSTANTIAL DWELLING-HOUSE, built of brick, containing passage, two parlours, drawing-room, and three bedrooms, and a bathroom in the basement, with good cellar and yard.

The above premises are brought into the market for POSITIVE SALE, and offer an opportunity for securing a block of unusually substantial built premises; they are erected by the late Mr. Matthew Lacey, regardless of expense, and without the slightest intention of sale, and it is said seldom so well adapted for the purpose to be bought. Plan on view at the Rooms.
